TUESDAY..... DECEMBER 11, 1860

We adhere to the opinion that some movement should be instituted at the earliest possible moment to arrest the progress of secession. The government is now rapidly approaching its dismemberment, and there is good cause to apprehend that unless something is done to bring about a conference of the Southern States, other than what may be proposed in the report of a Congressional committee, several of those States will soon have assumed an attitude from which they will not retreat. If there be a basis of the adjustment of our difficulties within the Union nothing should be left undone for its development. If there be in the South an attachment to the Union fairly maintained, Southern sentiments cannot otherwise be concentrated or made known than by a conference of the States in some form. As an initiatory step towards such a conference, we understand our own Executive proposes to submit a series of propositions to the Governors of all the Southern States, asking their counsel and co-operation in bringing about a settlement upon them as a basis. If these propositions be approved they can be submitted to the assembling Legislatures and conventions, and a Southern Convention called to pass upon them. But all this would be a subject of future discussion. The present good to be accomplished would be to arrest the secession movement and test the question as to whether the Union can be preserved upon any fair and honorable terms. The amendments to the Constitution here suggested would certainly be a final and permanent settlement, would forever remove the nigger question from political struggles and leave no right growing out of slavery to be adjusted. We append an outline of what we understand to be the plan, though of course it is as yet in a crude form susceptible of modification.

First.—The repeal of all laws in the free States nullifying or obstructing the execution of the Fugitive Slave Law.

Second.—Amendments to said law to enforce its thorough execution in all the free States, providing compensation to the owner of the slave from the State which fails to deliver him up under the requirements of the law, or throws obstructions in the way of his escape.

Third.—The passage of a law by Congress compelling the Governors of the free States to return fugitives from justice, indicted by a grand jury in another State, for stealing or enticing away a slave.

Fourth.—To amend the Constitution so as to divide all the Territories now belonging to the United States hereafter to be acquired between the free and the slave States, say upon the line of the 37th degree of north latitude—all north of that line to come into the Union with requisite population as free States and all south of the same to come in as slave States.

Fifth.—To amend the Constitution so as to guarantee forever to all the States the free navigation of the Mississippi river.

Sixth.—To alter the constitution so as to give the South the power, say in the United States Senate, to protect itself from unconstitutional and oppressive legislation upon the subject of slavery.

This programme to be presented first to the Governors of the slave States, who, or such of whom as approve it, are to submit it to their respective Legislatures, requesting a call of a Convention of the people of the slave States with a view of appointing delegates to a general Convention of all the States that may elect to meet on this basis for a full conference upon the subjects embraced in the foregoing propositions.

The Lago Case.

Gov. MAJOR has appointed Col. T. B. MONROE as Attorney for the State, to make the motion in the Supreme Court for a mandamus against Gov. Dennison of Ohio in the case growing out of his refusal to surrender Lago upon a requisition from this State. It is ascertained that a mandamus cannot be obtained, Col. Monroe will take other steps. He is authorized to employ assisting counsel in the case and will prosecute it vigorously. We understand that professional engagements at home would preclude the Attorney General of the State, July 1: James, from appearing, and hence the Governor had to select other counsel. He has made an excellent appointment, and we shall see whether there is any power in the Federal Government to compel a Governor of a State to obey the plainest requirements of the Constitution. This case promises to be one of great interest and importance.

The Kentucky Military Institute.
Some absurd rumors of disturbances in this flourishing school about the secession question have been copied by the press in various parts of the country from the correspondence of Georgia and South Carolina papers. One of these rumors is to the effect that the corps of cadets had offered their services to Governor Gist. We are assured by the Superintendent, Col. Morgan, that there is not a word of truth in any of these reports. The institution was never in a more prosperous condition, and the cadets are prosecuting their exercises and studies uninterrupted by any political disturbances whatever.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.—We learn from the Cincinnati Gazette that in Covington, on Friday, Tammie Webster, who at present resides near New Albany, Ind., had, while under the excitement of feeling growing out of some legal difficulties, discharged a pistol at his brother, Albert Webster, who resides in the neighborhood of Covington. The pistol was loaded with shot, which took effect in Albert's hand, inflicting a painful though not a serious wound. A warrant was immediately issued for Tammie Webster, and he was brought up for examination, but released until Saturday after entering upon bonds of $200 for his appearance.

[For the Yeoman.] Memories.

BY MARY MORTON GRAVES.

When the pale moon looks calmly down,
And the twilight hour has come,
How memory loves to linger round
My childhood's early home!

Yes, there each well-remembered form
And smiling face appears—
Distinctly can I see them now,
Through the mist of many years.

I well remember, even now,
How, through the woodland wild,
My mother led me by the hand,
A careless, happy child;

Twas long ago—yet methinks I see
The smiling meadow still,
And the little rivulet singing by—
The cottage on the hill

I see my noble father there—
I see him, as of yore,
As when, a little child, I ran
To meet him at the doors;

When a quiet, calm, and loving light,
Shone in his eyes so mild;

As he proudly b'nt his man's form
To bless his well-loved child.

The little brook still sing along—
Is singing merrily still;

The cottage yet is standing there
Upon the cool green hill;

And children still are playing there,
Upon the velvet ground;

But ah! how changed the scene to me—
There are strangers all around!

That father, he died long ago,
And I'm an orphan now;

His parting hand, long time ago,

Wn't laid my brow,

And now, the mourning cypress tree
Bends o'er his lowly tomb,

And the pure white rose is blooming there
Amid the church-yd's gloom.

Ah, yes! my father's laid to rest—
The last sad prayer is said—

And he, who was ever kind and true,

Is numbered with the dead!

Our loving circle's broken now—
Our circle—once so gay—

And the wealth and pride of our happy home
Has forever passed away!

Among my dreams of happier days,
While in distant lands I roamed,

The purest one will ever be
Of my childhood's early home.

I loved it then—I cherish it now—
And cherish it ever will,

Till they lay one down in the old church-yd's,

When my heart's wild thrubbings are still.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 5th, 1860.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT AT TRENTON, KY., last Thursday, a distressing accident occurred at Trenton, Ky., in which a young man named Cole Dickinson met with a sudden and untimely death at the hands of his friend, Mr. Charles Palmer, in the following manner: The latter was handling a shot gun, in his own store, and was showing Mr. Dickinson, who was his clerk, how to put out a candle by bursting a cap on the tube, believing the gun to be un-loaded. When he pulled the trigger, to his utter amazement, the piece was discharged, and the contents entered the face of the unfortunate Cole, who was standing in front of him. He staggered and was in the act of falling when Palmer caught him in his arms, and called for assistance. Cole died in an hour afterwards.

Report of the Secretary of the Navy.

The Secretary recommends, in addition to what we have before quoted, the raising and converting into first class steam frigates only eight ships of the line, at a cost of $183,000 each, as the others would not pay the expense, being old; that the frigates Sabine and San Jacinto be sold as they are, and the remaining six sailing frigates converted into steam ship-of-war, and finally into storeships; that new ships of war should be built to replace those built prior to 1840. The present condition of the active navy is commanded.

Having given in detail the other services of the explorers, Mr. Floyd states that "several new posts have been ordered and erected in the course of the last sea on, in the various Departments, for the better defense of the different Territories, and the fortifications leading through them, between that country and the settlements of New Mexico, a distance of the thirty-fifth degree of latitude across which roads are impracticable, from the extraordinary character of its surface."

Further north they have resulted in the establishment of a new route across the Great Basin

from Great Salt Lake City, and in ascertaining the impracticability of other lines of communication between important settlements in the interior."

DICK'S ACCOUNTANT

AND

DISPATCH PATENT.

The Inventor's Claims as acknowledged and protected by the Governments of Canada, the United States, and Great Britain; to all whom it may concern;

What I claim as my invention is the contrivance of keeping accounts current, of whatever kind, descriptive, or otherwise, and the method of carrying the statements of the several accounts standing in the printer's type, or their equivalents, the type being arranged in form as to admit of being readily and quickly re-adjusted in any particular part, where an account may have been altered. By the lapse of time, or the current of business transactions, so that, when remodeled in such parts up to any given date, an impression then taken from the type shall exhibit, in printed form, the true state of all the accounts, and, as far as possible, the balance between the parts, or conclusions, in accordance with the order or forms contemplated in keeping the record; rendering it, in commercial business, a balance sheet of the most compact and perfect character, the details of which may be easily and readily ascertained, and the statement, when it is necessary, the fact or facts which will indicate the fact of any alteration, or the reason of the same.
